Almost half of the areas valued as cultural resources are threatened by urbanization, sea level rise or both, compared to only a third of the island as a whole.